Books are True Friends

Written by Ned Ison, Oscaloosa, Ky., Especially for the Eagle.

Sometime ago I wrote an article for the Eagle entitled, "The Blessing of Friends," and now I want to say that books are friends also. But too often they wait in vain. One reason for this is, I think, that the people are overwhelmed by the crowd of books offered to them. There are books and books, and there are books which are not books at all.

In the old days books were rare and dear. Our ancestors had difficulty in procuring them. Our difficulty is what to select. We must be careful what we read and not, like the sailors, take bags of wind for sacks of treasures, not only lest we should now fall into the error of the Greeks and suppose that language and definitions can be instruments of investigations as well as of thought but lest, as too often happens, we should waste time over trash. There are many books to which one may apply, in the sarcastic sense, the ambiguous remark said to have been made to an unfortunate author. "I will lose no time in reading your book." It is wonderful indeed how much innocent time and happiness we thoughtlessly throw away.

Many, I believe, are deterred from attempting what are called stiff books for fear they should not understand them; but there are few who need complain of the narrowness of their minds, if only they would do their best with them. In reading, however, it is most important to select subjects in which one is interested. I remember some few years ago consulting one of my teachers as to the selection of books to read. He asked me what interested me most and advised me to choose that subject.

This, indeed, applies to the work of life generally. I am sometimes disposed to think that the great readers of the next generation will be, not our lawyers and doctors, shopkeepers and manufacturers, but the laborers and mechanics. Does not this seem natural? The farmers work mainly with their head; when their daily duties are over the brain is often exhausted, and of their leisure time much must be devoted to air and exercise. The laborer and mechanic, on the contrary, besides working often for much shorter hours, have in their work taken sufficient bodily exercise and could therefore give any leisure they might have to reading and study. They have not done so as yet, it is true, but this has been for obvious reasons. Now, however, in the first place they receive an excellent education in elementary schools, and in the second have more easy access to the best books.

Some of us do not wonder at what men suffer, but we often wonder at what they lose. We suffer much no doubt from the faults of others, but we lose much more by our own ignorance. It is one thing to own a library; it is, however, another to use it wisely. If I were to pray for a taste which would stand me in stead under every variety of circumstances and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me through life, and a shield against its ills, however things may go amiss and the world would frown upon me, it would be a taste for books.

I speak of it, of course, only as a worldly advantage and not in the slightest degree as super-seding or damaging from the higher office and surer and stronger armor of religious principles—but as a taste for reading. Give a man this taste and a means for gratifying it and you can hardly fail of making a happy man, unless, indeed, you put into his hands a most perverse selection of books. I have often been astonished how little care people devote to the selection of what they read. Books, we know, are almost innumerable, our hours for reading are alas, very few, and yet many people read almost by hazard. They will take any book they chance to find in a room at a friend's house, they will buy a novel at a railway station if it has an attractive title, indeed, in some cases I believe the binding affects their choice. The selection is no doubt far from easy. I have often wished that someone would recommend a list of 100 good books. If we had such lists drawn up by a few good guides they would be most useful. I have heard it said that in reading everyone must choose for himself, but this reminds me of the recommendation not to go into the water till you can swim. In the absence of such lists we may fall back on the general verdict of mankind. There is a struggle for existence and a survival for the fittest among books as well as among animals and plants.

Age is a recommendation in four things—old wood to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust and old books to read. Yet the oldest books of the world are remarkable and interesting on account of their very age, and the works which have influenced the opinions or charmed the leisure hours of millions of men in distant time and far-away regions are well worth reading on that very account, even if they seem scarcely to deserve their reputation. Of all the privileges we enjoy in this twentieth century there is none perhaps for which we ought to be more thankful than for the easier access to books.

These are the masters who instruct us without rods and ferules, without hard words and anger, without clothes or money. If you approach them they are not asleep, if investigating you interrogate them they conceal nothing, if you mistake them they never grumble, if you are ignorant they cannot laugh at you. This feeling that books are real friends is constantly present to all who love reading.

I have friends whose society is extremely agreeable to me, they are of all ages and of every country. They have distinguished themselves in the cabinet and in the field, and obtained high honors for their knowledge of science. It is easy to gain access to them, for they are always at my hand service, and I admit them to my company and dismiss them from it when I please. They are never troublesome but immediately answer every question I ask them. Some relate to me the events of past ages, while others reveal to me the secrets of nature. Some teach me how to live while some teach me how to die. Some drive away my cares and gladden my spirits, while others give patience to my mind and teach me the important lessons how to restrain my desires and to depend wholly on myself. In return for all their services they only ask me to accommodate them with a convenient chamber in some corner of my humble habitation where they may repose in peace.

He that loves a book will never want for a faithful friend, a wholesome counsellor, a cheerful companion and an effectual comforter. By study, by reading, by thinking, one may innocently divert and pleasantly entertain himself, as in all weathers, so in all fortunes.

A Refutation

Sandlick, Ky., Sept. 26.
Editor Eagle,
I noticed in the News-Record, published at Hindman, Ky., an editorial commenting on the result of our recent Republican primary headed "Bloody Eleventh." The use of that epithet, "bloody," hurled at our people by the enemies of this section usually come from the outside. It seems to me that such aspersions should never come from any man of mountain stock unless he really deprecates the blood of his country. The point I would especially make here is that the good people of Knott and the Tenth district generally are of the same caste and should foster the same sentiments and the same aspirations. In the despised mountain counties the people of all political and religious persuasions are bound not only by the same environs but are all of the same make-up and the same blood, and any vile aspersions thrown at mountaineers or at this good old patriotic Eleventh district is as much a stigma on those of one political party as another—though coming only from hot-headed politicians of one party.
Jesse W. Adington.

WHEN YOU TIRE, LET US KNOW.

When our readers grow tired of the articles written under the above heading a hint from them will sidetrack us upon another subject. The Eagle is published for the good of the public and as long as it can "sput a sput" or wiggle a feather or flap a wing it will be found fighting along this line. The articles shall be simple, home-made, just such as a common "country Jake" can write. They will be written for our people alone. Sometimes they will be humorous, but always serious. The well educated person can understand the simplest language, the uneducated can understand this alone. So by reading these articles if anything results from them it can only be good. In order that that this good may result the articles must be original, that is, as original as it is possible for anything to be in this day of deep literary research. Sometimes we may write of the boundless beauties of nature or tread in imagination, the unexplored depths of the skies. At all times we want our readers to go with us, assuring them that the trip will be as pleasant as its possible to make it.

O—O

HAVE YOU A BOY TO SPARE?

Really, isn't the above a foolish question? Do you think so? Alright then, let's you and I sit right down and talk this matter over. The writer will talk first and if you don't reply, will you kindly ponder the matter over? Here is what we think of the above question: The saloon (any place that furnishes intoxicants) must have boys and men or it would shut up shop. It is a great factory and unless it can have 2,500,000 from each generation for raw material it would be crippled or thrown out of existence, its operators be put out in the world thus dwindling the public revenue. One family out of every five must contribute a boy in order to keep up the supply. Will you help? Aren't you already helping, and which of your boys shall it be? Are you a father and have you given your share to keep up the supply for this great institution that is helping you pay your taxes and kindly assisting you in electing your officers? Have you contributed a boy—if not, some other family has given two, or more than its share? Will you ponder these questions, go over them with me and answer them to God to whom you will one day give an account? Perhaps you have already invited your boy to make himself a saloon sacrifice by turning up the bottle in his presence, or coming home with an unnatural flush on your cheek. If you have, get down now and beg to your boy to save you from his own blood. And ye mothers, wives and daughters, listen! By example, precept and influence do all you can to save the boys from such a fate. Don't say, "its no boy of mine," and let him go. One word from you, fitly spoken, might save a dear life from an awful ruin. If others are determined to walk the path of ruin, let no Letcher county boy, let no mountain boy, be one of the number!

O—O

We're not given much to poetry Or things like that; We're not given much to dressin' Or standing very pat. But we hear the music hummin' All around about And know the train will get you If you don't watch out! Spec'lators are in the hollows, They're pacin' up the hills, They've money in their pockets To pay their eatin' bills. Plant now that "crap" of onions, You laik and lazy "lout," And the train it then won't get you— If you do watch out. Why, sow that bed of mustard, That patch o' turnips, too, Take care of all those scrapin's, They'll be of use to you, Ope wide those dreamy eyes Get now square down to biz And when the train toots and hollers, You can make things whiz.

O—O

LIFE AND ITS OPPORTUNITIES.

Life is a gift of inestimable value. Life is given us for a noble purpose, the improvement of ourselves and helping to better the condition of our fellow man. Isn't it important that we make a proper use of our time and our talents? Work and progress are the order of creation. Among the busy toilers in life's harvest fields there is no place for idlers. But we should not spend all our time digging in the earth after the perishable things of this world. Man was formed for a nobler purpose. Is he not living for eternity, where silver will not be needed, where gold will be of no value? Along every pathway in life are weary, toil-worn pilgrims longing for a cheering word, for a helping hand. We must not fold our hands in idleness, murmuring "there is nothing for us to do." We must not deny light and help to those who are adrift on life's stormy sea. They who have the brightest light should hold it up the highest that its rays may flash out the further in the surrounding darkness. If life and its many opportunities have been well improved, how grand will be the reflection when we come to stand on the other shore of life, and look backward, that our great object in life was to help our fellow men.

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs and bowels and are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

For Internal and External Pains.

On the special call of County Judge Jno. D. Fitzpatrick all the Justices of the county met here Monday for the purposes of inaugurating plans to better the condition of the county's public roads. It appears that most of the free labor on the road's has already been expended and still the roads need a good deal more work, so now whatever funds the county has or can spare for road purposes will be used. Each Justice will be required to look over the ground in his own precinct and say what is necessary to be done. While the funds for road purposes this year are a mere speck of what will be required to put the roads in proper shape, yet every cent available will be spent in the most economical way so as to get the best advantage possible under the circumstances.

CARPET SWEEPER TOO NOISY.

Dealer Left with Memory of Good Joke to Compensate Him for Loss of Sale.

A hardware dealer in town tells a story about a prim old lady who came into his store the other day to purchase a carpet sweeper. She gazed here and there about the store as she entered, and finally going up to the dealer she looked at him quizzically over her glasses and asked: "Do you keep carpet sweepers?"

"Yes, madam," replied the dealer, and naming the two kinds which he had in stock, asked which she desired.

"Well," said the lady, "you may show me both kinds, if you will."

"Just a moment, madam, until I get them from the rear of the store." And with that he went to an obscure corner and took down the carpet-sweepers from their hooks upon the wall.

It happened that in front of one of the makes which he desired there was a lawn mower so hung that he had to move it. He took it down from the hook and as he did so it rolled along the floor with a grinding rattle.

Before he had time to turn around he heard the old lady shout from the front of the store: "That makes more noise than my old one, and I don't care to look at it," and so saying, she whisked out to the door, leaving the dealer to wonder whether the joke was worth the loss of the sale.—Portland Express.

The Stark Year Book for 1910

is ready to mail. It will be sent to any person interested in fruit-growing on receipt of 7 cents to cover postage. The Stark Year Book for 1910 represents an entirely new idea in nurserymen's literature—it is a work of art as well as a catalogue of Stark Nursery products. Within its covers are 32 full-page illustrations of nature. 84 pages are devoted to descriptions, prices, and records. Stark Delicious, the apple that has revolutionized orchard planting and established a new standard of apple values (selling at $10.00 per bushel box this year); Stark King David, another apple of wondrous quality and merit; Stark King Philip, a hardy black grape of California grape quality, and dozens of the very best things in the horticultural world are fully described, illustrated, and priced.

To any one planting one tree or many, of fruits or ornamental, this book is of incalculable value—a horticultural text-book—a guide to proper selection. Stark trees have stood the supreme test of actual planting for 85 years—they are the yard-stick by which all other nursery products are measured—they are the first choice of this country's most successful orchardists. The success of the orchard is dependent on the kind and quality of tree planted. Stark varieties are the best of the best. Our record of 85 years of successful selling is a positive guarantee of tree quality.

Before you decide to buy, send 7 cents for the Stark Year Book—do it today before the edition is exhausted.
